

Derry - Celebrating Leicester

The individuals, the people who live in and reside in [Leicester] should act. Because you can go up the chain and speak to politicians or MPs or councillors or whatever.

But they are not always the ones that are on the streets that you are living on. So people need to come out and actually do something. Rather than putting it down, it might be worth actually trying to improve the place. Even small things. If there are local plant pots that are a bit of a mess that someone has not been able to afford to redo or something like that, or make the area look nice, offer to do that. Or support wherever possible. That responsibility where possible comes down to the individuals who reside in the city.
