

Wendy - Lived religion and belief

You think about how things have changed. At SACRE (Standing Advisory Council on Religious Education) one day, we had people of all faiths around the table. We were talking about equality and such like, and one person said 'well, I can understand this, my son's transgender'. And I said, 'That's alright, I've got a wife at home!' And everyone just laughed. Can you imagine that happening years ago? The chair of SACRE said they had a transgender child as well. And I thought, the world's just different. It's just not an issue anymore. In fact, they quite welcome the idea there's diversity.
