

Balquis - Lived religion and belief

I cannot say that my parents were very strict about religion. They made sure that we learned how to read the Quran, and that we covered ourselves, and we were respectful. But I think as I grew up and I got to know people from different religions, different backgrounds and visiting different places of worship, I feel like I have come to a place where it is more about the human being. That is more important to me than a person's religion.