

Mongi - Quirky treasure

I've got my beehive in the back garden! It's unusual. Some might say crazy, but I'd describe it as unusual. For me, it's my passion. I've always wanted to have a beehive, to have honey. Not to make money, but I've wanted people to try Mongi's honey – well not my honey, the bees' honey! It's just something that I want to do, to share the love with everybody. That's why I pass a bottle on to everybody and say 'try it, see what you think!'. In our Indian culture, I would say people might see me as a bit nutty. I've questioned the word nutty, am I a nutty person? But my answer is no. I think I have a lot of interests. I want to do things, not what an Asian person would do, but what I want to do. I'm an individual now.
